The aim of this conference was to present scientific knowledge and practical experiences related to the following themes, such as: Economics, Management and Entrepreneurship, Rural development and Information management and quantitative methods. My topic title was “Socio-economic Characteristics impact on Peruvian Cocoa Farmers’ Welfare: Acopagro Cooperative- A Case Study” and was under the Economics scope field.

The conference was held on September 14th (Tuesday) and I had to present in the plenary session at the main auditorium of the Czech University of Sciences called Aula. My topic was selected as one of the three best topics among the whole papers presented for this event purposes.

My presentation was about 20 minutes and 5 minutes of questions. It seems that Europeans were interested in the presentation as almost all the presenters were from Europe (just two were from America). There were no questions regarding to my econometric analysis. However, there were plenty questions about the coca (drugs trafficking) and its relationship with the cocoa and the welfare of the farmers.

As a result, I could publish one paper in the proceedings book of the conference which had 2 referees. This counts for my PhD student performance because I have to publish at least 2 papers for being graduated. Moreover, I received suggestions and comments during my presentation that will help me in my performance as a researcher.

I am very grateful to my professors Fukuda Susumu and Moritaka Masahiro for supporting me in my research development and for allowing me to attend to this fruitful conference which helps me in my career performance. Finally, I would like to give special thanks to JSPS for supporting me economically in order to attend this wonderful event.
